Boston's Co-Operative Workroom Gives Encouragement to Poor.

rom the Boston Transcript. The man past middle age, infirm and deprived of his earning power, is an object of sympathy which has often set many searching their own minds with more difficult than the man's-the woman's. The woman too old to find wage employment; the woman, young or old, too unskilled to sell her toil; the woman Turns of Speech the Meaning of once affluent, too proud to accept charity, yet knowing no way to find work that she can do; the woman, young or old, abruptly deprived of her wage-earn-er, finding herself with children to sup-port and no means of doing it. And all this is complicated by the too great reluctance of some to accept charity, the too great willingness of others, and the general weakening of fiber which accompanies the acceptance of money which has not been earned. sew; girls who covet pretty things too to make; women of our own country forced to eke out a scanty livelihood have found this co-operative work oom a road back to hope and to self-support. They are taught work; they can always be sure of work; there is no age limit; and in the period before their work qualifies to the salable standard allowances will be made. But the work which is sold never falls below that standard. The room does not put "charity work" on the market, but the sort of articles that people like to wear and to use. The object of the workroom is, of course, to

The Dog Cemetery in Paris.

Decent burial for dogs! Paris has the finest dog cemetery in the world. Again "Taking him down a peg" is a famil-Laurence Sterne is upheld in his belief iar expression which dates back to the that "they order this matter better in days of the great Saxon primate, St. France." His pen should still be at work again to describe the death of Tristam's ass, with a further note on his burial in an annex of the dog cemetery. Founded an annex of the dog cemetery. Founded justable, it was so placed as to regulate the size of the drink. When a man bean annex of the dog cemetery. Founded several years ago by some wealthy women who wanted a place of burial for their favorite dogs, the cemetery has come to be used by all the people of Paris who would perpetuate the memory of their pets. The cemetery is located at Asnieres, about three miles from the city, on an about three miles from the city, on an about three miles from the city, on an appearance of the drink. When a man began to get too lively or pugnacious the peg was lowered in his mug. From this grew the expression "taking him down a peg."

Everybody has heard or used the familiar expression: "Tell that to the marrines" but how many know it was first repularized by Lord Byron? In his poem, winds its way out to the tree-grown field. say the French newspapers. An attempt to establish a dog cemetery for Boston by act of the legislature falled on account of the promoters' demand that the land for the cemetery be exempt from taxation. Individuals have often given his infuriated neighbors from lynching their dogs decent burial. The graves of him.

Valuable Pennies. From the Boston Transcript.

The familiar old English saying, "Take care of the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves." proves its worth whenever a big coin collection is sold. In London a few days ago a penny coined in the reign of Aethelred brought $500 (£100) by auction. One which was minted when Alfred was king was sold for $200. These were coins dug out of "finds," either the secret stores of the thrifty of one thousand years ago or the ruins of some ancient disbursing office. There is a great deal of hidden treasure in the earth, and if Aethelred pennies are to be found in veins it would pay English capitalists to start mining operations. The numismat-
